

Reader's Theater

Reader's Theater is when students read aloud parts from a script.

Students work in small groups to practice reading a script where every member has line. Then the students perform to the rest of the class by reading the script out loud to the class.

Students build fluency skills by re-reading the script out loud multiple times.

Reader's Theater helps students learn to read out loud with expression and helps students to build their confidence.